Authors' Biographical Notes

Dr. Linda Palfreeman is a Lecturer in the Department of Humanities at the University of Cardenal Herrera, Elche, Spain. The principal focus of her research interest has been the development of medical services during wartime and, in particular, during the First World War and the Spanish Civil War. She has published extensively on the topic with significant contributions to the history of health care and medical practice in wartime.

Dr. Peter Pinkerton is Professor Emeritus in the Department of Laboratory Medicine and Pathobiology at the University of Toronto, and was formerly Chief of Clinical Pathology (including Transfusion Medicine) at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre. He has had an ongoing interest in the history of transfusion in warfare partly as a consequence of involvement in overseeing a transfusion service supporting the first and largest trauma unit in Canada. Publications include an account of the unique contributions of Canadian Military surgeons to transfusion in the First World War and a biographical note on Norman Bethune and his remarkable efforts to provide transfusion support in Spain in 1936-37 during the Spanish Civil War.
